BUCKS OFFICIAL FAMILY HONORED AT DINNER-PARTY

Highly Praised for Calibre of Their Service to County

AFFAIR AT CO. SEAT

Former U. S. Senator Joseph R. Grundy Is Main Speaker of Evening

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 6.—A dinner honoring the new and the retiring members of Bucks County's official family was served at Doylestown Inn, last evening. One hundred and fifty were in attendance, the main address of the evening being delivered by former U. S. Senator Joseph R. Grundy, of Bristol.

The group addressing the gathering praised the type of officials and employees it has been Bucks County's fortune to have. State Senator Edward B. Watson said that in his opinion "Bucks County never had a better ticket than at the last election." He predicted that the next two years will be the most important in the history of the county.

Serving as toastmaster was C. Harry Clayton, of this borough, the Republican county chairman. Mr. Clayton called on the retiring and new county officers who were the guests of honor.

Mrs. Norman Lear, Doylestown, president of Bucks County Council of Republican Women, said "It was a very pleasant experience to support such a fine ticket as at the last election."

President Judge Hiram H. Keller stressed the importance of having "intelligent deputies in the county offices." He mentioned that several years ago, when he was county chairman, it was decided that the very best of deputies were to be selected.

District Attorney Edward G. Blesster gave a clever resume of the personalities of the retiring officers. Then in a more serious vein he pointed out that in Bucks County, unlike some other counties, officers and deputies serve the county, and earn the money that the job warrants.

Introductions by the toastmaster were inclusive of: John S. Roberts, Bristol, retiring county commissioner; Simon K. Moyer, Joseph W. Hallowell, Edward C. Hancock, county commissioners; Mrs. Leonore Leatour, retiring clerk of Orphans Court, and her successor, Mrs. Ralph Dunn; Marvin V. Keller, retiring Register of Wills; Harry W. Wambold, retiring clerk of Quarter Sessions; Eugene T. Rosenberger, register of Wills; Elwood A. Britton, county treasurer; Matthew L. Godshall, clerk of Quarter Sessions; Ernest H. Harvey, chief clerk for County Commissioners; J. Alfred Rigby, county coroner; John L. Stover, retiring county treasurer.

The retiring officers paid high tribute to their deputies and the calibre of their work.

Serving as dinner chairman was Ernest H. Harvey.

The address of former U. S. Senator Grundy follows:

"Two years ago I had the honor of speaking to you at a dinner similar to this one.

At that time I reviewed our national situation, and said that the great need was for the American people to be roused into realizing that an attack was being made in Washington on our American way of government.

"This attack is still going on.

"I pointed out also that in protecting our Constitution and our national solvency, the Republican Party was the only agency available to the American people.

UN MAY CONSIDER "CARIBBEAN THREAT"

"Trigger-Finger" of Diplomatic Shotgun is That of R. L. Trujillo

SMUGGLING CHARGE

A new United Nations debate highlighting the struggle of East and West may grow out of what happens in a Florida courtroom within the next few days. Behind the trial of a former Cuban official on charges of arms smuggling lies an amazing story of international intrigue climaxed by the abortive putsch against the Dominican Republic last fall. The possible world-wide echoes from this trial are discussed by Pierre J. Huss, veteran chief of the INS United Nations Bureau who has just returned from a tour of the Caribbean including a visit to the Dominican Republic. This is the first of three articles.

By Pierre J. Huss
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Jan. 6 (INS)—The United Nations Security Council may be called upon soon to consider charges that "a threat to the peace and security" has occurred in the Caribbean, the American Mediterranean.

Such a development, based on charges similar to those in the Greek case, could easily sprout into an extension of the battle between East and West, but now applied to the Western Hemisphere and especially the strategic areas encompassing the Panama Canal.

The trigger-finger on this diplomatic shotgun is that of much as-sailed Dictator, Rafael L. Trujillo, President of the Dominican Republic for the past seventeen years.

He has already gathered as ammunition, evidence purporting to prove that in the latter half of 1947, some neighboring country headed by Cuba condoned a conspiracy clinched by an abortive "invasion" attempt of the Dominican Republic.

Whether Trujillo's government could induce the Security Council to pronounce a verdict against Cuba or any of the other Latin-American nations remains to be seen. But if the case does come before the United Nations it cannot help but expose a colorful picture of international intrigue so directly affecting America's own doorstep.

LESSON IN PANAMA

America's Good Neighbor policy came a terrible copper in Panama when the banana republic's national assembly, by unanimous vote, rejected a treaty giving the United States a 10-year agreement for bases. The assembly's action was foolish. But it could hardly have occurred if Washington's policies in Panama had been more far-sighted.

Latin Americans are a proud people. They have always resented the tendency of North Americans to treat them as "natives." Our officials and military men as well as our business men and tourists have shown a tendency in the past to be contemptuous of the forms of common courtesy as practiced by Latins, to consider it beneath their dignity to speak Spanish (or Portuguese) properly, and in general to act as if their hosts were an inferior people.

In the Canal Zone and Panama this attitude went so far as to include lower pay and privileges for Panamanians than for Americans doing the same work. There was "unfair competition" by American commissioners with Panamanian merchants. And there was never too much respect for the civil liberties of Panamanians. These local policies, as the assembly's action indicates, have done a lot to undermine the Good Neighbor policy.

There were 41 votes lined up for the treaty when it came before the assembly. But once its opponents defined the issue as American arrogance, the treaty was defeated, 51 to 0.

Panama will probably reconsider. The prompt withdrawal of American troops was a mollifying gesture. It is obvious that Congress is unlikely to vote the proposed $2,500,000,000 for improving the Canal unless the treaty is ratified. And that is a huge sum for a little country to reject.

But regardless of what Panama does, there is a lesson in the incident which America should take to heart. There will be other Latin American incidents unless we learn to mind our manners.

Who would have thought that sophisticated New Yorkers could become so greatly interested in a subject as bucolic as the weather?

The vetoes were for the blatantly political purpose of preventing the Republicans from carrying out their campaign promise—which means, incidentally, keeping the American people from receiving something they had voted for.

The Republicans who were deceived last year by the President's promise of "co-operation" are not likely to walk twice into the same trap.

If their tax-cut program is not promptly introduced and sent along its way, they might be caught napping by a sudden demand by the President for the passage of precisely the measure they have in mind. Most observers assumed, at the time of the vetoes last year, that the President planned to announce his own tax-reduction scheme this winter as part of his campaign for reelection.

Tax reduction is the one logical approach to the larger question of reducing the expenditures of the Federal Government to a point where the country can afford them—to a point where they can be paid for out of a free economy, without slowing down the wheels of industry, and without causing more inflation.

Those who are in charge of the Republican tax-cut bill claim that it is in "veto-proof" form.

What this means is that last year's bill when re-introduced will have some new features. Something new has been added, namely a tax credit written into the bill for repatriation all the local or un-dated news published herein."

As now pictured, the measure will once again call for a 30 per cent slash in the income taxes of low-paid persons, 20 per cent for those in the middle brackets, and a smaller percentage for those with the higher incomes.

Two important additions are expected to be made, which will reduce the total income tax bill by about $6,000,000,000, according to estimates, compared with the $4,000,000,000 reduction voted and vetoed last year.

One of these is a community property plan, such as many states already have, whereby a married couple's earnings can be divided between them to bring them into a lower tax bracket and thereby reduce their total taxes. Such a measure was passed last year in Pennsylvania, but thrown out by the courts as unconstitutional. The matter, however, can be handled very simply at the national tax level without the embarrassments which caused the Pennsylvania statute to be overruled.

The other addition is an increase in the amount of personal exemption for all tax payers. There is strong logic back of this idea. The amount of goods which can be purchased by the exemption, because of price inflation, has sharply decreased. Under such circumstances, why shouldn't the exemption be raised?

At any event, Congress has certainly adopted the better part of wisdom in deciding to have the tax fight out with the President as the first step of the new session.

"That statement is still true.

The basic line-up hasn't changed materially in two years.

"But a great deal has happened. A lot of water has gone over the dam.

"Mainly a series of political victories has vindicated the Republican Party's original position on these matters. By one landslide after another, the men and women of this country showed that they are eager to follow the Republican Party in a battle to save our Constitution and our free government.

"A year ago last fall Pennington's Republicans successfully crossed one hurdle when they swept the third successive Republican administration since the Little New Deal into power at Harrisburg.

"An even more sensational Republican victory that fall was the election of Republican majorities in both Houses of Congress on the famous 'Had enough?' issue.

"At your dinner two years ago, one of your guests was the Republican floor leader in the House of Representatives at Harrisburg, Rep. Franklin H. Lichtenwalter, now Congressman from the Eighth Pennsylvania District.

"When he spoke that evening, we little realized the part he was going to play a few months later in the hardest fought and most successful of all the recent Republican campaigns.

"After that war, our national government helped set up free republics in both the defeated and the liberated countries.

"All those republics since have fallen. They were replaced by dictatorships along Socialist or Communist lines. But it is worth remembering that the abandonment of republican government in Europe never got far until we ourselves had come under a New Deal which decided that democracy was decadent and that the Constitution was a relic of the horse-and-buggy days.

"Those forces are still in control of our national government, and they are showing just as little faith as ever in the American way of life. We can tell what they would do to our system by what they have offered in the nations conquered in the War. The Constitution they wrote for Japan is essentially Socialist in form. It makes the government master of the people, not the people master of their government. So with the new Italian constitution, it is also distinctly Socialist in tone.

"The American people want this nation kept a republic. They want free government. They want government as the servant of the people, not the master of the people. They want a sound economy. They want sound money. They want a stop put to deficit-financing. They want inflation controlled... and they want inflation attacked at its source, which is too much spending and too much taxing by the national government. The Chief Executive ever succeeds,

Scientists find that some dinosaur eggs, supposed to be 10,000,000 years old, are really 94,000,000 years old. This is almost as bad a guess as some of the politicians make.

Perhaps inspired by the martial axiom that for every offense there is a defense, some eating places are hoisting the sign, "Not recommended by Dunkin' Heinz."

in this country as was provided by our State Department in Italy, in getting the whip hand on Congress, then we will be on a one-way road to dictatorship.

The American concept of government was set forth in the Declaration of Independence and echoed in the Constitution. It is that every individual citizen has rights which no government, not even his own, dares to take away. That concept is one of the cornerstones of the American political party.

"It is still turned out, as they tell us at Washington, that we are going to have to finance the races of Europe until they get through fighting around with Socialism and decide to stand on their own feet, then at least we would be able to do so without risking our own economy and our own future.

"The theory of Socialism and Communism is quite different. It is that the individual has no rights which are superior to the rights of the government. Citizens own only what their governments let them own. They do only what their government allows them to do. That is the concept towards which we have been drifting.

"Good government is always government which is close to the people. That's one of the things which has gone wrong at Washington. The national rulers have lost touch with the people themselves, or have grown so strong that they have arrogantly decided they no longer care what the people think and wish.

"But your Bucks county government has not lost touch with the people. It has shown, over and again, that it recognizes and accepts its responsibility to give the people of this county the best possible government at the least possible cost.

"The developing preparations for the Presidential campaigns this summer and next fall indicate that it is going to be one of the most important political battles since the problem of slavery gave birth to the Republican Party.

"This year, just as in the Civil War, there is not merely a political existence at stake, but also the whole existence and destiny of the nation. "I cannot find better words with which to close than those I used here two years ago:

If their tax-cut program is not promptly introduced and sent along its way, they might be caught napping by a sudden demand by the President for the passage of precisely the measure they have in mind. Most observers assumed, at the time of the vetoes last year, that the President planned to announce his own tax-reduction scheme this winter as part of his campaign for reelection.

Tax reduction is the one logical approach to the larger question of reducing the expenditures of the Federal Government to a point where the country can afford them—to a point where they can be paid for out of a free economy, without slowing down the wheels of industry, and without causing more inflation.

Those who are in charge of the Republican tax-cut bill claim to have it in "veto-proof" form.

What this means is that last year's bill when re-introduced will have some new features. Something new has been added. The bill will have "that new look." Basically, however, it will be identical.

As now pictured, the measure will once again call for a 30 per cent slash in the income taxes of low-paid persons, 20 per cent for those in the middle brackets, and a smaller percentage for those with the higher incomes.

Two important additions are expected to be made, which will reduce the total income tax bill by about $6,000,000,000, according to estimates, compared with the $4,000,000,000 reduction voted and vetoed last year.

One of these is a community property plan, such as many states already have, whereby a married couple's earnings can be divided between them to bring them into a lower tax bracket and thereby reduce their total taxes. Such a measure was passed last year in Pennsylvania, but thrown out by the courts as unconstitutional. The matter, however, can be handled very simply at the national tax level without the embarrassments which caused the Pennsylvania statute to be overruled.

The other addition is an increase in the amount of personal exemption for all tax payers. There is strong logic back of this idea. The amount of goods which can be purchased by the exemption, because of price inflation, has sharply decreased. Under such circumstances, why shouldn't the exemption be raised?

At any event, Congress has certainly adopted the better part of wisdom in deciding to have the tax fight out with the President as the first step of the new session.

Bucks Official Family Honored at Dinner-Party

"That statement is still true."

"The basic line-up hasn't changed materially in two years."

"But a great deal has happened. A lot of water has gone over the dam."

Mainly a series of political victories has vindicated the Republican Party's original position on these matters. By one landslide after another, the men and women of this country showed that they are eager to follow the Republican Party in a battle to save our Constitution and our free government.

"Like countless other persons, I grew up believing that the American form was the best government on earth—that it alone had proved itself really successful, both in the material field of strengthening and enriching the whole people, and in the broader field of preserving human liberty."

"A year ago last fall Pennsylvania's Republicans successfully crossed one hurdle when they swept into power, but it was the third successive Republican administration since the Little New Deal into power at Harrisburg.

"An even more sensational Republican victory that fall was the election of Republican majorities in both Houses of Congress on the famous 'Had enough?' issue.

"At your dinner two years ago, one of your guests was the Republican floor leader in the House of Representatives at Harrisburg, the Hon. Franklin H. Lichtenwalter, now Congressman from the Eighth District.

"When he spoke that evening, we little realized the part he was going to play a few months later in the hardest fought and most successful of all the recent Republican campaigns.

"Last summer interlopers from outside the districts moved in and allowed the Democratic organization aside. They made the Taft-Hartley labor bill the issue, and they used imported labor funds and political invaders to try to smear it.

"They tried to make the Bucks-Lehigh District their guinea-pig—but the guinea-pig turned around and bit them!

"Republicans of Bucks County can take everlasting pride in the record-breaking victory they won last September. No single Congressional fight in years has done more to improve Republican Party morale nationally than the campaign in this District.

"In all these campaigns, the Republican Party has been fighting to stave off the attacks being made on Constitutional principles and American traditions. Once this issue has been made clear to the voters, Republican success has been assured.

"The American people want this nation kept a republic. They want free government. They want government as the Constitution laid it down—the servant of the people, not the master of the people. They want a sound economy. They want sound money. They want a stop put to deficit-financing. They want inflation controlled... and they want inflation attacked at its source, which is too much spending and too much taxing by the national government—too much reliance on the New Deal."

Who would have thought that sophisticated New Yorkers could become so greatly interested in a subject as bucolic as the weather?

Russians continue to resist the advance of civilization, but it will do them no good. The bath tub is mighty and finally conquers all.

Scientists find that some dinosaur eggs, supposed to be 10,000,000 years old, are really 94,000,000 years old. This is almost as bad a guess as some of the politicians make.

Perhaps inspired by the martial axiom that for every offense there is a defense, some eating places are hoisting the sign, "Not recommended by Dunkin' Heinz."

Astronomer says center of universe is 46,000 light years away from the earth. This will be enlightening to some communities whose proponents think they are.

in this country as was provided by our State Department in Italy, in getting the whip hand on Congress, then we will be on a one-way road to dictatorship.

"The American concept of government was set forth in the Declaration of Independence and echoed in the Constitution. It is that every individual citizen has rights which no government, not even his own, dares to take away. That concept is one of the cornerstones of the faith of the Republican Party.

"The theory of Socialism and Communism is quite different. It is that the individual has no rights which are superior to the rights of the government. Citizens own only what their governments let them own. They do only what their governments let them do. That is the concept towards which we have been drifting.

"Is that what the American people want? The answer is an emphatic no. Whenever the issue has been made clear, as it has been again and again in recent Republican campaigns, the voters have arrogantly decided they no longer care what the people think and wish.

"Good government is always government which is close to the people. That's one of the things which has gone wrong at Washington. The national rulers have lost touch with the people themselves, or have grown so strong that they have arrogantly decided they no longer care what the people think and wish.

hundred cents. There would be an abundance of goods, and an abundance of real money to buy them with. Inflation would be only a matter of ancient history.

"If it still turned out, as they tell us at Washington, that we are going to have to finance the races of Europe until they get through fooling around with Socialism and decide to stand on their own feet, then at least we would be able to do so without risking our own economy and our own future.

Cuban Education Minister Jose Manuel Alemán was compelled to resign his post after being linked to the anti-Trujillo plot.

His reappointment as Minister without Portfolio further strained relations between the Cuban and Dominican governments, particularly since the Cuban Education Minister was accused by Trujillo of having raised or contributed $350,000 for the outfitting of the "International Brigade."

the trial is of interest not only in its political aspects but equally on the question of illegal arms smuggling and what real interests lie behind the apparent wide traffic in explosives.

Dominican spokesmen maintain, for example, that some weapons and bombs seized from the revolutionaries have been traced to a shipment sold by the United States War Assets Administration to the Venezuelan government.
